

Harmonizing demand supply to a digital future

For a Glass and Ceramic Materials Manufacturer

CORNING

Corning is a game changer in the new Glass Age. Headquartered in New York, Corning Inc. has been offering specialized services in the areas of advanced optics, display technologies, environmental technologies, life sciences, optical communications, pharmaceutical technologies. Operational since 1851, the company's Corning® Gorilla® Glass is aided by its research & development in the field of emerging innovations.

Business Challenges

- Optimize the duration of executing the S&OP cycles
- Reduce the number of tools and manual effort required for demand and supply planning
- Establish a unified model for demand and supply planning starting with three major business divisions.
- Global visibility and collaboration to the planning cycle tasks, decisions, and final outcomes
- Forecasting simulation capabilities requiring minimal effort to collect data points and set calculations
- Reduce planning errors and improve forecast accuracy

The Resolution

- Leveraged IBP S&OP module to create a centralized demand planning and supply planning process with visibility, accessibility to information based on user roles which allows the planners to work in parallel by utilising the JAM collaboration feature. Heuristic planning model and supply planning optimizer were implemented to improve the planning cycle and decrease supply chain costs.

Intrigo Advantage and Key Benefits

- Knowledgeable team with experts in all sectors in the implementation
- Shorter implementation cycle using agile methodology
